Bird Feeding and Bird Watching

Bird Feeding is a cherished part of Spring for many. When a person thinks about it – Bird Feeding is a connection with something that is beyond our control. Although we can set out the right birdseed, we can't make a goldfinch or cardinal stop by to eat it. It's a privilege. And in a world that can be filled with too many worries, attracting birds and listening to their songs is an unexpected gift that always puts a smile on our faces.

Here's a recipe for success for attracting your favorite feathered friends:

1 cup of cornmeal

1 cup of peanut butter

1 cup of sugar

1/2 cup of flour

1 cup of water

1 cup of birdseed

In a microwave safe bowl, combine the 1st five

Ingredients. Microwave on high for 3 to 5 minutes.

Stir in birdseed. Cool. Press into two sandwich size

Plastic container; refrigerate. Fits into suet cages.

Welcome the Birds- Spring Checklist

- Fill feeder daily. Natural food is in shortest supply in early spring, and migration is in full swing.
- Watch for the first birds of spring, red-winged blackbirds, American robins, phoebes, flickers and tree swallows.
- Put up sugar-water feeder for the first arrivals of hummingbirds, orioles and grosbeaks.
- Clean out and restart birdbath operations. Water is very popular and could attract a new visitor to your backyard.
- Attract bluebirds with live mealworms. You can buy these on-line or pet stores.
- Include suet for quick energy on cold spring mornings.
- Look for waves of warblers, all dressed up in their brilliant breeding plumages.
- Put out nesting materials of yarn, string and hair. An empty suet cage feeder makes a good basket for nesting materials. Clean out empty birdhouses.
